The Declaration of Independence was adopted by the Continental Congress on July 4, 1776. It declared the thirteen American colonies' independence from Great Britain.

The Declaration of Independence is a powerful and eloquent statement of the principles of liberty and self-government. It begins with the famous words, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

The Declaration of Independence was a bold and revolutionary document. It challenged the authority of the British Crown and asserted the right of the American people to govern themselves.

The Constitution was adopted by the Constitutional Convention on September 17, 1787. It established the framework for the government of the United States.

The Constitution is a complex and brilliant document. It divides the government into three branches: the legislative, the executive, and the judicial. It also establishes a system of checks and balances to prevent any one branch from becoming too powerful.

The Constitution has been amended twenty-seven times since its adoption. However, its basic principles remain the same. It is the supreme law of the land and guarantees the rights and freedoms of all Americans.
