Joachim Du Bellay

Joachim Du Bellay (1522-1560) was a French poet and member of the Pléiade, a group of seven poets who sought to reform French literature. Du Bellay's work is characterized by its elegance, wit, and passion. He is best known for his collection of sonnets Les Regrets, which he wrote while in exile in Italy.

Les Regrets

Les Regrets is a collection of 191 sonnets that Du Bellay wrote while he was in exile in Italy. The sonnets express Du Bellay's feelings of homesickness, loneliness, and regret. They are also a reflection on the nature of love, friendship, and the human condition.

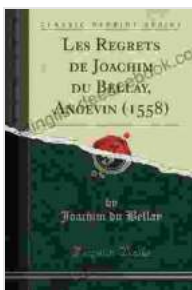

Les Regrets is considered one of the most important works of French literature. It is a powerful and moving expression of the human experience that has resonated with readers for centuries.
